GREAT CONVENTION FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

Will be Held Here Next Week
With Soldier's Banquet
Tuesday Night.

A great gathering, in the form of a home-coming and welcome to returned soldiers and sailors will be held here next week and will last two days, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 1st and 2nd. These are being given in a great many counties of the state and are proving a sweeping success. The convention will be given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and the Red Cross and will provide entertainment and give a welcome to every returned sailor and soldier in Ohio County who will attend. Invitations are being sent out to the returned military men and it is hoped and expected that every one in the county will be present.

On Tuesday night, April 1st, a banquet will be given the soldiers in the basement of the Methodist church. Every soldier, sailor or marine in the county is requested and invited to be present at this time. Invitations in the form of circular letters are being sent to every person in the County who has been discharged from military service so far as is known. However there may be some whose names the committee has not obtained. If so they should notify the committee of their intention to be there and plates will be reserved for them. It is also requested that all who receive invitation cards, sign and return them. If you cannot be present, sign and return the card so stating, so there will be no wastage or over-amount prepared. Every soldier who attends will be served but it is requested that they wear their uniform if possible as it will add to the appearance. The program will consist of speeches by well known speakers, musical renderings, etc., and will be highly entertained and instructive. All soldiers are requested to be present and all citizens are expected to lend a helping hand in making the convention a great success.

YOUNG MEN ENTERTAIN.

The young men entertained here Thursday night with a delightful dance, which was well attended and was a great success. The music was furnished by Miss Lillian May and Mr. E. F. Sturgeon Jr., of Owensboro. Those who danced were: Mrs. Louis Riley, Misses Winnie Simmerman, Beulah Palmer, Rose Ethelwyn Collins, Mary Warren Collins, Edna Black, Martha Caroline Pate, Beulah Moore and Mrs. E. F. Sturgeon Sr., of Owensboro. Messrs. Louis Riley, Addison Howard, James Glens, Arthur Kirk, Goodall Wooten, and Clarence Igleheart, of Hartford; Frank Barnes, Marshall Barnes and Orville Hodge, of Beaver Dam; Hamill Klag, Willie Maddox, Clyde Cecil and Forest Smith of McHenry and Mr. Otto Biddle, of Owensboro. Chaperones were: Mesdames. Simmerman, Birkhead and Collins.

CENTER SHOTS AT SENATORIAL POLLY.

The voice of Senator Norris, of Nebraska, bearing all the earmarks of his paternal ancestor has broken loose again, but since as Cervantes says "It is a waste of labor to shave an ass" the country can allow him to bray his fool self to death.

Ireathes there a man with heart so dead to all sense of honor that he would not be ashamed to attend the funeral of that bunch of obstructionists who for partisan and demagogic reasons announced their intention to sulk like a hot steamer? They prejudice and seek to prejudice the court of final action against the most humanitarian measure that has been proposed since the Sermon on the Mount. Who does not see through the camouflage and who cannot read the thinly disguised plan to force the home rule issues on the Peace Conference? Its dollars to doughnuts that they are a bunch of Kalmuckies with certain ecclesiastical leanings that have been and are and will be for every thing un-American. They are doing now what Ireland did during the war: demanding pay for a service before the service is rendered. Shame on the whole shabby bunch.

What do the fathers and mothers who furnished their sons to make the world a safe place to live in think of those representatives of the Kaiser who are willing for the sake of political prestige to sell their influence in order to defeat the very purpose for which many of our bravest and best died? Benedict Arnold held the unenviable distinction of being the arch traitor until recently, but by the side of that bunch of Congressmen he looks like a fledgling saint.

That bunch of buzzards undertook to intimidate the Professor and compel him to call an extra session of Congress in order that they might pour slop into the eager ears of their political henchmen and dopes, but the seasoned Pedagogue said nay, nay Pauline, since which time they have proceeded to try to regain their wind.

Who said the President's position had changed and that his Fourteen Points had all been broken off? The fellow who thinks so has not set on one of them recently. The Kaiser and the whole horde of Prussian priests do not think so. Neither does any one else except it be a partisan whose mind is in the ellipse.

When a blundering, bone-head like Senator Borah, of Idaho who thinks that he and his bunch are the only fit Presidential timber and when a great party can furnish as better it is time for all parties to the disgrace to hang their heads in shame. The aforesaid Senator a few days ago remarked on the floor of the United States Senate that "if the Savior of mankind should appear and declare for a league of nations I would still be opposed to it and refuse to vote for it" whereupon about forty of that same type proceeded to sign an agreement not to vote to ratify the Treaty. Such idiotic, blasphemous unworthy of any man in whose hands the people have placed the lawmaking authority. And if the party to which this blabberer belongs does not repudiate him and his utterances then the people at large should kick the whole thing into kindling wood.

THOUGH HE BE DEAD, YET HE LIVETH.

A dead man was found on the tracks above Beaver Dam Friday morning. A passing train-crew saw him lying prostrate at the foot of a bridge. All the crew was excited. As soon as they reached Horton, they phoned the operator at Beaver Dam to hurry the motor car and section crew to bring the body in. Beaver Dam was all aflutter. Whose body could it be? Who could have suffered the awful fate of having his life crushed out by the grinding wheels of the train and his remains then left on the tracks? The motor left in hot haste for the scene of the tragedy. It was crowded to overflowing with the curious, as many as could find a place to hold on. Beaver Dam waited with breathless silence the bringing in of the corpse. A great crowd had gathered.

Coming slowly down the tracks, with funeral solemnity, they saw the motor slowly approaching. Stretched at full length across the car they saw the corpse. The crowd shuddered. The motor slowed and stopped at the station. The onlookers uncovered their heads in the presence of the dead. The undertaker was on hand and prepared to take the body to his morgue, when the dead man raised up!

Followed explanations which soothed the nerves of the fear-stricken crowd. The "dead man" was a member of that band of discontented brothers who are seeking continuously new localities. The warm spring sunshine was too enticing and he had given himself the restful attitude for a peaceful snooze when the train men saw him. The motor car corps had found the "body" walking toward town when they started for the place of the place of his supposed demise.

Mrs. J. H. Thomas arrived yesterday from Louisville and will spend several days with her husband, Mr. J. H. Thomas, editor of the Hartford Republican. Mrs. Thomas is spending the winter in Louisville where the children are in school.

From the Heart of The Rhine Country.

Mr. Wade H. Haize,
Hartford, Ky.

Dear Brother and family:
Will write you a few lines to day as I am not so busy and thinking you might be glad to get a word or two from Germany. I sent you a card last week giving you my new address and hope you have received it by this time. I am well and making the best of a bad proposition, and I, as well as all boys over here would be glad to be back in the and if Freedom again.

I suppose every thing will work out the way the BIG TEN wishes it, I am sure that if we had all of Germany under control as well as we have west of the Rhine it would only be a short time till we could be at home. The people here seem very well contented to have us stay here, nitho we are somewhat crowded but still the Dough boy spends his money and there are quite a few Souveniers for sale here and the Souvenir Business is as the boom in Germany. There seems to be very much friendship shown the Yanks by the German people it is nothing unusual to see a soldier and a German fraulein walking side by side down the streets of these little towns altho it is whispered that it is strictly against the military rules the boys are rather aware of an Officer while in company with his fraulein.

The children here seem to think the American Soldier a Christmas Tree and are very anxious to get on friendly terms with every Yank they see. Seems very unusual too I have never known a child to scorn or fear an American Soldier, even when we first entered Germany and the sight of an American was something unusual these people showed no fear or outward hate toward the Americans. I am not putting too much confidence in these people I am sure if they thought there was a chance to win what they had lost they would not hesitate to do so for the cause is a hopeless one for them. I am still at Reg. Hdqrs. and getting along O. K. I am intending to take a trip to Coblenz, on the River Rhine just as soon as the Clerk returns from a trip to Paris, as it takes several clerks to keep things straight here. I will tell you all about my trip when I come back. I am sure it will be an interesting trip as there is so much wonderful scenes, great mountains, old Historic Castles and a tunnel five Kilometers in length (about 3 miles). There is a great German fort there that will house 100,000 men, so I am told, and there are forts all up and down the Rhine river. It is better that things were settled when they were than for us to have taken them by force for there would have been a hard fight for us. As it is the Yanks are living in the forts and making things as homelike as possible. I am sending a letter to Arglin to day he is in the 89th Div. I understand and the 89th is at Trier, only about 30 miles from here. I intend to go to Trier as soon as possible. It is a large city and very interesting as it was once the ancient city of Treves. I came through Trier on the march through from France. Trier is near the Province of Luxembourg. Luxembourg is the smallest nation in the world; it is not much larger than Ohio County and maintained its neutrality through the war, altho Germany occupied it and marched her armies through. Luxembourg's army of 250 soldiers and 3 caaaas could not make a dent in Germany's hordes that she marched through so little Luxy just was helpless that was all she could do. But she showed how she stood after the Germans vacated her territory and we entered, we were treated as liberators and German flags were torn down and the Allied flags were hoisted in their place. It is hard to decide what to do with Luxembourg now as her little Ruler, which was a girl called the Duchess of Luxembourg, has resigned she was accused of being pro-German and popular sentiment forced her to vacate. I could tell you more about this interesting country but space does not permit.

In speaking of castles, there are several old ruins near here I went all through one not long ago and saw how its defences were built. I am sure a few men at the time it was built could defend themselves against a much larger force, but now one of our G. I. Cans (high explosive shells) would be sufficient to demolish the castle and all its defences. In climbing to the top of the castle I ascended several flights of steps, having to use great care and precaution at times as the steps were so badly decayed. You climb one flight then make a detour then another flight another detour and continue to do this till finally you come to an open country which was the defensive position for its defenders in the tower. I suppose this was the last stand the defenders had to take as farther below and all around the castle were defensive positions. On arriving at the top of the tower we looked down and found that on one side of the tower it was between 150 and 200 feet to the earth, and in the center of the tower there was a hole down to the earth. I suppose the defenders on top used this to get supplies from the bottom. At the top of every flight of steps, where we made the detour, there were port holes with the flare extending inward, the part exposed from outside was much smaller, and the defender could fire from these holes without exposing himself. The walls of this tower were about 2-1/2 foot thick. The people make an effort to preserve these ruins and unless there are something done there will be no remains left in a hundred years from now. This castle I am describing dates back to about the year Ten Hundred; Napoleon is said to have stayed in this castle while his victorious armies were over running Germany, and till this date the Germans have a hatred toward the French.

France was so badly demolished that I never found anything whole. There were very few men left in France and it was a common thing to see an old woman and child working in the field. The people in France, as well as in Germany, work cows. A Frenchman never carries anything in his hands or arms but hauls it in a wheelbarrow, while a Dutchman has a small wagon that he pulls around and can haul a big load on it as it is very strongly built. It is rather sad to see the great number of French towns and cities that are completely wrecked. You see them in various stages of ruins. Some are so completely destroyed that you can hardly find a trace left. I remember when we went through the village of Avancourt we could see what appeared to be piles of stone and crushed rock extending over a wide area one or two ruins of a building were more distinguishable than the remainder, we asked a party of Pioneers that were working there if this was once a town and were told that it was once the village of Avancourt, probably it will never be rebuilt as it would be just as easy to rebuild it at some other place. We saw other and if you passed through them at night it seemed more like a cemetery. At every place where there was a wall left standing a Dough boy had it occupied as a shelter from the weather and shells. I saw the ruins of great forests, we passed through the Argonne Forest which were mentioned in the papers so often, here was fought one of the hardest battles of the war and it certainly showed it, you could hardly see any thing that showed there had once been a great growth of fine timber. Great trees were cut and torn into kindling wood. The Argonne-Meuse fight was named from this forest and the Meuse river. This was the engagement that I was in and was one of the fronts that crushed the German liners, and ended the struggle. The French civilians had long ago vacated this territory which I am speaking of and we went some thirty miles and about 23 days without seeing a civilian. The first place we found civilians was at Mouzay on the Meuse river, we had driven the Germans back to this place which was or had been far behind the German lines and the civilian were under the control of the Germans. This town had been captured early in the war and in pretty fair conditions, I hardly know how the inhabitants felt towards us properly they were in doubt as to the outcome of the next fight which was to take place within about two miles of town, as the Germans had just been driven out the day before and knowing the dispositions of the enemy, who had promised faithfully not to bombard the town; but we had scarcely entered our advanced guard when the enemy began to violate his promise. The farther we went the heavier was the firing our guns which had been brought up could not remain silent and by the time we were well in town there was a very lively engagement going on and it is claimed the German used gas, if so, I do not know how the civilians came out as we went on through town before they began to throw over gas shells and were held up as the firing was so severe we could not advance in marching formation. Our casualties were very heavy until dark came to our rescue. The next day was the 11 of November so you know what happened at 11:00 on the morning of the 11th, well we never pulled off that fight if we had there would have been many soldiers under the French sod than there are now.

I suppose I have written enough this time, will close by saying give my love to the family and will ask that you give my regards to Mr. and Mrs. Ramey Duke I think I am enclosing a piece of poetry composed and written by a dough boy and which expresses the dough boy's sentiment thoroughly.

Your Brother,
PVT. ROMA HAIZE.

SAYS JAPAN MEANT TO BACK GERMANS

But Was Afraid of United States and Played Silent.

Washington, March 25.—In an address published in the final edition of the Record of the last Congress, Representative Alvan T. Fuller, of Massachusetts, describes an interview with M. Delanney, French Ambassador to Japan, and attributes to the Ambassador the statement that Japan was not sincerely pro-Ally, but intended to support Germany until a Japanese mission learned how wholeheartedly America was going into the war.

Mr. Fuller's remarks, printed under the privilege accorded members to insert in the Record speeches not actually delivered on the floor, concerned primarily abuses of the franking privileges. Turning from that subject, he told at length of a visit to Europe shortly after the armistice was signed.

"My trip across the water was uneventful," he wrote. "I found among my fellow-passengers a most delightful person, who was no other than M. Delanney, the French Ambassador to Japan. I took occasion to ask the Ambassador if, as a result of his observation, the Japanese were sincerely pro-Ally. To this inquiry the Ambassador replied very definitely, 'No, sir,' and inquired, 'Who in the world thought they were sincerely pro-Ally?'"

"Ambassador Delanney stated to me that the Japanese intended to support Germany, after their commission visited here and saw how wholeheartedly we were going into the war they were afraid to do so. Ambassador Delanney stated that he sailed from Japan to Vancouver, and when the party arrived and learned the news that Austria had surrendered, the Japanese members of the party were visibly disappointed.

"He likened the Emperor and the military cast of Japan to that of Germany. He said their methods and ideas and ideals were identical with those of Germany."

CHAPTER VII.

THE CROSSING OF DEVON RILL.

Devondale, geographically speaking, was an inland town. It did not stand upon the banks of any river, nor was it near any large body of water. The only objection it could put up against being called an inland village was a small stream that flowed just west of the town; and that could not be relied upon, for it was not always there. Usually, during the dry days of summer, its depth was from six inches to a foot; but when the Autumn rains set in it continued bank full until late in the winter, often overflowing its banks and inundating the little valley through which its course lay. Sometimes, too, during the summer months, when there came a great downpour of rain, it rushed down its channel like a foaming torrent for days at a time. When this happened it frequently carried away the little culvert that served as a bridge, dislodged fences and committed similar annoyances for the Devondale people who, despite its ravages, did not respect it enough to call it even a creek. So, just as they called it a rill,—Devon Rill.

But the flood times were happy times for Mr. Davis, who owned the only mill in the Devondale section. It was located just below the avenue that ran from Devondale to the Hartford place, and was perfectly accessible to the farmers of the vicinity. Mr. Davis, not being able to purchase a steam or gasoline outfit, had fallen upon the happy idea of harnessing the water power of Devon Rill. So he constructed a dam across the little stream and erected a great water-wheel so it could be turned by the force of the current, but to his surprise the water came over the dam with such small force that it would not even budge the wheel while it was yet unconnected with the machinery. So he was forced to wait a time until a flood came in order to get it; then he harnessed up his machinery and made good while the rain fell.

Owing to the mill not being much in use, no great care was taken of the building or lot and it soon took on a dilapidated appearance. Weeds sprang up in rank profusion and wild vines clambered over the roof and matted the treetops. Settling as it did, embowered in the great green arms of the oak trees, it presented a very picturesque and pleasing appearance. In summer one could hear the water pouring over the dam with a gentle hissing murmur; or, if after a rain, with a loud and thunderous roar which, mingled with the creek of the rusty mill-wheel, was anything but pleasing to hear.

It was late in a soft August evening when Samantha received an invitation to attend a party to be given that night at her Cousin Katy's at Devondale. Hastily dressing, she went alone up to the little town, and as she strolled along she did not notice the dark storm-clouds that were gathering in the west. She was thinking of Oscar. Of course he would be at the party and would walk home with her in the moonlight or drive her home in the new phaeton which he owned. At any rate he would be there and the prospect of spending a happy evening in his company was to her a delicious anticipation.

It was a gay little crowd that gathered at her cousin's that night—gay as such crowds usually are when the young of a village gather for fun and frolic. But it was with inward disappointment that Samantha noticed that Oscar was not among those present. She had counted on seeing him and had hoped to, for she found a strange delight in being in his presence. And also because the thought of going home through the valley alone was not exactly relishing. Of course there were dozens of young men at the party who would have been glad of the opportunity of accompanying her home, for she was a local belle. But their company did not fill her with that pleased joy and they were not so simply devoted as—well she could not trust them as she did Oscar.

After the party was over and the guests were beneath the trees drinking lemonade, the storm that had been brewing all evening broke. A sudden flash of lightning and a valley of thunder sent the girls screaming into the house, just in time to escape the ghastly raindrops that fell in torrents. The boys, acting the part of gallants, attempted to rescue the ladies and chairs and got a thorough soaking for a reward. Then they all gathered around a great fire that had been lit in the hall, the boys drying their garments as best they could while the girls shuddered in the back-ground, each emitting a ferocious yell whenever the thunder sounded. Outside the tempest raged, tearing the branches from the trees and hurling them against the house like the bombardment of a catapult, while the lawn was decked with tiny rivulets which glimmered brightly when the sulphurous lightning danced.

Until late in the night the storm raged in its demoniac fury. Then it ceased as suddenly as it had begun, the clouds rolled away in companies, and a great full moon, cool and sweet, bathed the landscape in silver. As soon as the rain ceased, the party-goers made ready to depart for their homes. The chivalrous boys provided wraps for the girls by giving them their coats; for not a girl had brought even a semblance of a coat or shawl. Then with such expressions as, "We just had a grand time," "Well, the rain didn't spoil our fun anyway," one by one they passed out through the gate. At last only Samantha remained. Her cousin did not suppose she intended to return home that night, so she prepared to retire.

"Well, dear, you will remain with me until morning, will you not?" she asked casually, in order to have something to say.

"No, really, Cousin, I cannot, as I promised mother I'd return."

"What, you are not going home tonight through all this mud?" she asked in surprise.

"Oh, it isn't muddy. It rained so hard the mud is packed. But if you've got something I can put around me to shield me from the night air, I would appreciate it."

Her cousin threw a heavy antebellum shawl around her shoulders, saying as she did so mischievously:

"It's a pity you have to walk home tonight. I would have thought Oscar would have come for you in his new phaeton. I'd give him a good going-over if I were you."

"Oh, I will. Goodnight," Samantha called back laughingly. As she walked hurriedly down the shadowy pathway, the cool night air fanned her cheeks and awoke in fresh vigor that taunted her to walk faster and take less notice of the road. The grass by the roadside was woven in webs and spangled with raindrops, gleaming under the brilliant beams of the low moon like ten thousand twinkling diamonds.

She would never have known she was approaching the Rill had not the roar of the waters suddenly smote her ears. She stopped still. What must she do? It was dangerous, she knew, to try to cross for the bridge was liable to drift away at any time. Of course she could go back to Cousin Katy's but that would be an embarrassment after her refusal a few minutes before. She stood and parleyed,—unconscious that the water was fast rising and would soon cover the valley. Finally she decided to go back to her cousin's and started on her return. But to her consternation the water had covered the road behind her and, to use a military term, completely cut off her retreat. She was in a dilemma. The noise of the Rill was growing gradually louder. She knew the flood was creeping higher and higher, inch by inch, and that soon it would burst over the banks of the narrow channel and sweep the valley with all its fury. In the midst of this she would be caught. A vague sense of fear that something awful was going to happen seized her, and with it a determination to escape at all odds.

She hastened toward the stream to see if the bridge was still there. It was. She placed her foot upon it to see if it was still firm and it appeared to be, although the seething boiling mass of water that swept beneath almost touched the planks. She sprang onto the center of the bridge, which with a splash and a rocking motion, suddenly careened over, almost throwing her into the water. She clung to the bannisters frantically. The abutments had been washed away; the bridge was afloat and headed downstream toward the mill dam. She realized this and cried out loudly for help but the sound of her voice was lost in the roar of the tumultuous waters. She was drifting, drifting, helplessly down to her destruction, with rescue practically impossible had there been someone there to attempt it.

MARSE HENRY'S DISAPPOINTMENT.

Regarding the reason Col. Waterson is so bitterly opposed to everything the President does, the Cadiz Record says:

Those who have followed the course of Col. Waterson for years past had no cause for surprise at the outbreak of the aged journalist a few days ago when he denounced President Wilson and his plan for a League of Nations. Twenty-five years ago it was his boast that the nomination of Cleveland for a second term would be party suicide and declared that the party was marching through a slaughter house into an open grave. Cleveland's overwhelming election was the result. After he and Col. George Harvey found out that Woodrow Wilson would not stand for them, he proclaimed him a New Jersey crook with the result that Wilson was overwhelmingly elected to the Presidency. It's a great pity that a man of Mr. Waterson's ability should grow so bitter in his declining years.

A PRACTICAL EXAMPLE.

The American people, and especially the working classes, have just had a practical example of what political partisanship is, when practiced during times of stress. In the recent Republican filibuster when the bill for appropriations for various public enterprises was cast into the scrap heap, with it went the appropriation for government employment agencies in various parts of the country. One of these was located at Owensboro and has sent hundreds of men to government cantonnements and other public works, thus serving the country and the laborers in an almost indispensable manner. This has been closed down because the Republicans in Congress wanted to show their politics. At a time when soldiers are returning and the labor situation is in a turmoil, these agencies filled a place of supreme importance. But the Republicans wanted to show their politics and the laborers will have to find their own jobs.

WHEAT GROWER'S PRO-FIT'S TO HELP LOAN.

Government Loses Money Guaranteeing Grain Prices and Farmers are Expected to Show Gratitude.

In view of the fact that the Government has gone for the wheat grower in the guaranteed price of $2.20 per bushel for his wheat what it has not done for any other class of agriculturalists, a special appeal is to be made to induce him to invest in a $100 bond of the Victory Liberty loan for every 100 bushels of wheat he sells to the Government.

This is only fair, it is urged, inasmuch as it is now plainly evident that the Government will be compelled to resell this wheat probably at about $1.35, or 85 cents a bushel lower than the guarantee price, which will add at least one million dollars to the war expense.

The wheat farmer has made the profits and will do so during this year because the Government looked out for his interests and is keeping its word to him, though it means a loss to do so. The farmer should have no hesitancy in taking a high grade security in payment for the difference between what the Government gets and must pay him for the wheat.

If the guarantee on wheat did not exist, American wheat would have to come into competition with foreign wheat, which has been released by the ending of the war, Canada, Australia, Argentina, and even India and Russia, having great stocks that have been held back by an interrupted ocean transportation. The farmer would have had to pay the penalty. As it is Uncle Sam is the one who will pay the penalty through his goodness in protecting the wheat grower of this country.

Uncle Sam has not been a slacker in rallying to the help of the farmer. Now it remains to be seen what attitude the farmer will bear to him at this time when great sums of money are needed to pay war's expenses and make peace sure.

POSSIBLE POLITICAL PLANKS.

1. We believe in the abolition of derby hats.
2. We believe in corporal punishment for folk who use the phrases "What do you know about that?" "What's the good word?" and "Believe me!"
3. We advocate the branding of persons who borrow books, umbrellas and lawn-mowers, and fail to return them within six months' time.
4. We believe in heavy fines for men who carry smoldering cigars in street-cars.
5. We pledge ourselves to secure the abolition of $1,000 apartment-houses with $2,000 front entrances and $3,000 rents.
6. We advocate the imprisonment of apartment-dwellers who scream, play phonographs and jump up and down after 11 p. m.
7. We believe in the rights of a man to be as disagreeable to unwelcome guests as he pleases, without laying himself open to the charge of boorishness and eccentricity.
8. We believe in the exclusion of end-seat hogs and solitary whistlers from public carriers.
9. We stand for the social ostracism of theater patrons and movie fans who explain the plots to their companions in advance.
10. We believe in the abolition of all vaudeville jokes which have been served for ten years and over, and in the recall of the sport-shirt as an article of clothing for motion-picture heroes.

PLAYING SCHOOL.

Dear me! - Isn't a rainy day awfully poky?" sighed Laura.

"Yes, I miss school because I love my teacher," answered Bobby. "Let's play school, and I'll be Miss Mamie, will you?" asked Laura.

"Yes, let's," says Lucy, and in a twinkling Bobby and Lucy had gotten their slates and pencils, and were seated before their little schoolma'am.

"Attention!" said Laura, alias Miss Mamie. "The class in arithmetic come up front."

Up marched the school in a body. "Now, Master Bobby, how much are nine peaches and seven pears? Tell me that, sir, quickly."

"Fifteen," promptly answered "You may go down tail," said Laura. "Lucy, you answer please."

"I—I—don't know," stammered Lucy. "I sha'n't play with you, 'cause you are trying to make us fail," said Bobby. "I never fail in real school!"

"Try again. If you ate nine peaches and seven pears, what would they amount to?"

"A pain in my stomach," answered Bobby, quickly.

Lucy laughed out loud, and Laura tried to look stern.

"What is the capital of Turkey?" asked teacher.

"T," answered Lucy.

Bobby laughed this time.

"Bobby, do you know how to make a Maltese cross?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered Bobby.

"That's fine," said Laura. "I'm glad to hear you so prompt with your answer. Go to the board and show us how you would make a Maltese cross."

"Why, just pull her tail, that's all," laughed Bobby.

"Now, Lucy, can you tell me what an island is?"

"Yes, Miss Laura—I mean Miss Mamie—an island is a pimple on the ocean."

"A queer definition, but very expressive. Now, who can tell me what a mountain is?"

"I can, teacher," said Bobby, raising his hand frantically.

"That's fine. What is a mountain?"

"A wart on the face of the earth," Lucy burst into laughter.

"You may stand in the corner for laughing, miss," said Laura, sharply.

"I won't," retorted Lucy.

"I wouldn't, either," frowned Bobby.

"Then," said the little schoolma'am, throwing up her hands, "I won't play; so there," and in less time than it takes to tell it the school was broken up, and the rain was falling inside as well as out.

At that moment mother came in with a dish of cakes. In a twinkling the clouds cleared away, and, figuratively speaking, the sun came out as all three children grew friendly over the cake.—Exchange.

COL. DENHARDT IS BACK HOME.

New York, March 19.—With 655 troops of the 27th Division (former New York National Guard) the cruiser Seattle arrived here today from Brest. CONGRESSMAN - AVIATOR PLEADS FOR TEAM WORK.

Representative Says Buying of War Securities Will Bring People Closer Together.

Representative Firalla in Guardia, of New York, in a statement made public today, appealed to the American people to support the Government's campaign to raise necessary funds through the sale of War Savings Stamps and other government securities. When America entered the war, Representative La Guardia joined the American Aviation Service and headed the force of American flyers co-operating with the Italian forces. He served through the last Austro-Italian campaign and speaks with authority on war conditions. Representative La Guardia takes the position that "the fighting is over but the paying is not." His statement reads:

"Hostilities have ceased but the government is yet under heavy expenses. In order to enjoy the blessings of peace, obtained after a costly struggle, the Government needs money—it appeals to its citizens. Every American citizen should own Liberty Bonds. This is a good investment and at the same time a patriotic service."

"The buying of Bonds and War Savings Stamps is conducive to economy and encourages saving. To me it has even a greater purpose it will bring every citizen closer to his government. He becomes a part of it and above all things he will see to it that as soon as our boys are home and we get back to normal conditions, the government itself commences to economize."

"We must practice great economy in the next few years and it is the duty of every bondholder to see that the government cuts down expenses and that the country gets back to normal conditions as soon as possible. The Government will now help you save and in so doing you help the Government save."

"It is a great thing to be able to lean your Government money."

THE SUPER-"HISTERS."

(By R. E. Barrett)

Possessed of wisdom almost divine, Clothed in power almost sublime, Our worthy super-"histers" sit. They know what each should pay, And for what we may say They do not care a whit.

They don't give a darn What kind of a farm, Just so the taxes are high; If the word says so They just let her go, If the babes get hungry and cry.

If Taylor's old clay bank Is close to James' water tank, They are figured about the same; And if Taylor goes around When he happens in town, He's too late to get into the game.

But we are often told In the flock of old, Indeed 'tis its most favorite theme, Of a place below Where "superhisters" go, Where nothing is raised but steam!

Pasted on the window of the book-publisher's store was the sign, "Porter wanted," and in the window itself, on a pile of books, the placard: "Dickens' Works All This Week for $4." The able-looking Irishman read first the sign and then the placard. He blurted out: "Dickens can war-rk all the week for four dollars if he wants to, but I'll not touch it. Ye'd better kape Dickens."

A sportsman came to grief at the first fence. Pluckily remounting, he met the same fate at the second attempt. Asked the cause of his disasters, he said: "It vos like zis: Ven ve koms to ze first fence, I did zink my horse vud jomp; but he did not jomp, so I vent over his head. Ven ve koms to ze second fences, I did zink he vud not jomp; and he did jomp, so I vent over his tail."

DON'T THROW AWAY Your Old Tires

Conserve and Help Lick the Kaiser

THIS is to show you why "DRI-KURE RETREDING" with a 3,500-mile guarantee will save you one-half to two-thirds on your tire bill.

"Dri-Kure Retreding" is a proven factory method—not the old "kettle" process that soaks the carcass of your tire with steam, that, when cold, turns to water and rots the fabric.

"Dri-Kure" method is operated by DRY HEAT under 3,000 pounds pressure. The mere fact that racing drivers use tires cured by the Dri-Kure Process is proof that we build our treads for service.

Tom Alley, Chicago racing driver, averaged 104 miles per hour for 100 miles at Chicago Speedway, June 22, 1918, without a tire change and all on Retreded Tires. There's a reason.

Now Compare the Cost and Saving

Compare the cost of the tire you have on your car now and the cost of Dri-Kure Retreding, the same size. The chart of prices will show you the cost of retreding.

Now Figure the Saving for Yourself and remember that every tire we retread is guaranteed for 3,500 miles. Is this saving worth while? Think it over. Who wouldn't want to save from one-half to one-third of their tire bills?

We will gladly show you the complete detail and extend to you a personal invitation to come in for a chat. We will prove to you the success of this process to your own satisfaction.

Illindenburg, the great Field Marshall in other days, has become the great apologist for the Ex-Kaiser.

As James Whitcomb Riley would say, "the green's gettin' back in the trees" and we see the mocking bird and hear his "breezy, wheezy, tressy hum, too sweet for anything.

Do you believe in being fair with "our country consuls?" If so, help the Rest Room Committee in their attempts to provide a room for visiting ladies from the country when they may chance to be in town. It will show that you are interested in them as well as in their money.

The whole county could well afford to follow the example of those Hartford citizens who took it into their hands to put a section of the streets into shape. They have changed the looks of the street from the Herald office to Mayor Bean's house and does not look like the same roadway, owing to their energy and willingness to help in a public enterprise.

The flu seems to have run its course, though it is rather tricky and may flare again. From reports coming from different sections of the county, there is practically no new cases and only a few who are suffering from the after-effects of the disease. It is hoped that there will be no re-occurrence of the malady, and such seems highly improbable as spring is at hand.

We don't blame the millionaire railroad owners and Wall Street stock brokers to howl over government ownership, when the salaries of the presidents, with their silk hats and diamond-studded white shirts, have been reduced from a fat $100,000 per year to a paltry $12,000 and the wages of the track men, their "bired hands," have been raised from fifty to an hundred percent.

Things again grow dark on the horizon of the east. Japan, the second Germany, is barbarously mistreating American missionaries including both women and men. The revolution in Korea assumes proportions; the Japanese are determined to put it down and are killing the people by the thousands. Here, indeed, lies our next menace. The yellow race is alive to its opportunity. Japan is proud, arrogant and aggressive. She feels the pulse-beat of power. Already her designs are apparent. She is trying to purchase land in Mexico, trying to annex Siberia. She has the same view of world affairs as had Germany—is a militarist to the core. But less intelligent than Germany, less thoughtful but more treacherous. She sees in the chaos following the close of the war her opportunity for self-aggrandizement. She will take full advantage of it if she does not fear too much to antagonize America. Watch Japan.

The editorial in Friday's Courier-Journal, relative to Senator Lodge's attack on the League of Nations quotes Theodore Roosevelt, who stood foursquare for a League for Peace. Mr. Lodge claimed he represented the views of Mr. Roosevelt in his debate at Boston, and as the voice of Roosevelt was silent, he could not refute same. But the fact that Mr. Roosevelt died before the League was ever discussed and the fact that the present covenant was drawn up after he died, removes the possibility of his even having an opinion on the League plan as it is presented. Col. Roosevelt was always a peace-maker, the winner of the Nobel prize for bringing about peace between Japan and Russia. If he were living today he would not likely oppose a plan that has for its basic foundation the abolition of war and the ushering in of the peace of mankind.

We are told that the president has made a colossal blunder and has hindered the work of the Peace Conference by "his meddling interference" with the peace delegation in granting a peace that would put us in no better condition than the war found us, a scrap of paper pact of individual and jealous nations. We are also told that the Pope, who is always reluctant to speak on international affairs, has warned the Conference but the strong-headed Yankee school-teacher somehow doesn't seem inclined to listen to him. If the president, who is the head of the greatest and freest republic on earth is "meddling" when he attends the conference and holds for the League that is to alleviate if not emancipate a war-cursed world what is the Pope, who is a great religious head, and surely not the representative of any political government, doing when he offers his advice and counsel to the Conference?

CITIZENS WORK THE STREETS.

If one wants to know the definition of public spiritedness and community interest, he need not look in the dictionaries. Let him stand on Main street and cast his eyes from the Herald office up the street toward the railroad and he will see a practical example of these traits. One would scarcely recognize the resemblance between this street and the thoroughfare of yesterday. Because on Friday morning appeared the advance guard of a great road-building campaign that Ohio County is some day going to experience and decided to begin right here at home. When 12-2t ACTON BROS. Hartford, Ky.

We are in receipt of a marked copy of The Stars and Stripes, official organ of the American Expeditionary Forces, containing some poetry which we are mightily tempted to attribute to our old friend and former editor, Lyman Barrett.

After reaching a crest it has not attained before in years, the high water is receding rapidly. Much of the lowlands along the Rough have been inundated and much damage has been done to fences and buildings. However, the sediment deposited is beneficial to the soil.

We are going to have to petition the kindness of our readers again and request a few copies of the issue of March 12, as we ran short of papers that week and have had a number of requests for copies of the paper, by people who are reading the serial and do not wish to miss an issue. If you are through reading that week's paper we would appreciate it if you would let us have same. We thank you for your response to our other notice and in advance for all copies of this issue sent us.

THE POOR MAJORITY.

I am the Majority.
I come before the public with a plea for my rights.
But I am so confused, for I am the public, if there is any public, and I seem to be pleading with myself. And if so, why?
I used to have some rights. What I said went, in former days. I even lorded it over the Minority. The Minority, at that time, pleaded with me for its right; and I graciously granted them--when I felt like it.

But now, how things are reversed! The Minority has me on the hip. I dare not say my soul is my own.

If the Minority doesn't like what I do, or even more, what I do not do, it throws stones through my windows. It pours acid into my mail-boxes. It slashes my pictures. It leaves bombs in my front hall. It burns down my most cherished buildings.

When I make laws displeasing to the Minority, it hoots at them.

When I send the police against the Minority, it fires upon them.

When I put the Minority into prison, it goes on a hunger-strike and my own merciful laws compel me to release it.

"She is a woman who has suffered a great deal for her belief," announced Mabel.

"Indeed? What is her belief?" questioned an admirer.

"She believes she can wear a No. 4 shoe on a No. 6 foot."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Medicine that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. CALIFORNIA JUDGE ADMITS JAPANESE TO CITIZENSHIP.

Los Angeles, Calif.—Skinkichi Miyamoto, a Japanese was admitted to citizenship to-day by Judge Benjamin G. Bledsoe, of the United States District Court.

"Although the law provides that no Asiatic can be naturalized," Judge Bledsoe said, "it also is provided that all who served in the United States military forces during the world war should be given citizenship. Miyamoto served for that reason he is admitted to citizenship."

Judge—What is your occupation, my man?

Prisoner—I am a bus-driver, my lord.

Judge—You mean you are the driver of horses attached thereto?

Prisoner—Yes, sir.

Judge—You are charged with hitting this man on the face. Did you do it?

Prisoner—Certainly not.

Judge—What did you do, then?

Prisoner—I hit him on the nasal organ attached thereto.

SAVED BY A FAITHFUL WIFE

Suffered Thirty Years With Stomach Trouble and Hemorrhages of the Bowels.

The Story of a Wonderful Recovery

There is hardly any one who does not experience some trouble with the stomach. It is so common that we frequently pay little or no attention to it. Yet, the stomach is very easily upset, and occasional inflammation of the mucous lining develops, grows worse—the pain and distress is incessant and the truth dawns that we have chronic stomach trouble.

The case of Mr. Louis Young, 205 Main Street, Rochester, N. Y., is typical. He writes: "I suffered for thirty years with chronic bowel trouble, stomach trouble and hemorrhages of the bowels. We bought a bottle of Peruna and I took it faithfully. I began to feel better. My wife persuaded me to continue and I did for some time as directed. Now I am a well man." Mr. Young's experience is not unusual.

If you suffer from catarrh in any form, whether of the head, stomach, bowels or any other part of the body, try Peruna. It may be just what you need. Peruna comes in either liquid or tablet form and is sold everywhere. Your dealer has it or will get it for you. Ask for Dr. Hartman's World-Famous Peruna Tonic and insist upon having it. If you want your health accept nothing else.

All the sick and suffering are invited to write The Peruna Company, Dept. 78, Columbus, Ohio, for Dr. Hartman's Health Book. The book is free and may help you. Ask your dealer for a Peruna Almanac.

The Equity Home Keeps Its Promise to Reduce Selling Charges.

In 1914 the Equity Home Loose Leaf Warehouse was opened to keep the farmers from being overcharged for selling tobacco. We stated then that it was not our purpose to make a large amount of money, but that as soon as our house was paid for we would only charge enough to pay the stockholders a reasonable return on their investment.

This year we have made enough to finish paying for the house and its equipment, and to pay our stockholders a good dividend; therefore, the directors feel that we should reduce the selling charges. So on Monday, March 10, 1919, we reduced our selling fees 10 and 2 (what the other houses are charging) to 10 and 1.

We wish to thank the farmers who have supported us in this movement and to assure them that if we find it possible we will reduce the charges still further.

A photographic birds-eye view of a Lead and Zinc mining camp. Note the small acreage required to run a mill. A twenty-acre tract will run two mills of 250 tons daily capacity for ten to twenty years.

A view of the interior of a lead and zinc mine showing the process of getting out the ore.

The Mansfield District

The mineral wealth of the Missouri district is abundantly shown in the birdseye view at the top of this page. Mines and smelters paying prodigious profits are to be seen on every hand.

The reason lies in the fact that there is to be found the richest and purest ore deposit in the entire region.

In fact, the State of Missouri is the largest lead and zinc producing State, producing 32% of the output in the entire United States.

It is the theory of geologists that this point, Mansfield, on the highest ridge of the Ozarks, marks the spot of a prehistoric volcano which deposited this vast store of mineral wealth by an eruption.

At any rate, it is there and is being mined and smelted at tremendous profits.

It is an absolute fact that T. T. Becker refused last Friday an offer of $50,000 cash for forty acres of their holdings immediately adjoining the first mill. This is the forty acres north of the spot where the new company is to be located. Immediately adjoining is the Red Bird lead and zinc mine of W. E. Caldwell (of Louisville). Very rich ore was found in this mine at a depth of only thirty-five feet.

Profits in Lead and Zinc

When you buy stock in a lead and zinc mine you are not taking chances or buying a "pig in a poke," but you see what you are getting. The property is proven by drills, and you absolutely know that the mineral is there in vast quantities before mining is commenced.

A striking example of the success of the mills is the Eagle Pitcher Co. This company made forty millions of dollars in the past five years.

Five years ago this district was an empty prairie—today there are several hundred mills in successful operation and one acre of this land has produced a million dollars in ore.

Repeating A Pronounced Success

The unqualified success and splendid prospects of the Kentucky Mansfield Lead & Zinc Syndicate, composed almost entirely of Louisville men, has led to the formation of another company, headed largely by the same gentlemen, for the purpose of further development of additional holdings.

The first company was composed of T. M. Crutcher, President; N. C. Curcton, Secretary, and W. E. Newbold, Treasurer, with the following directors: T. M. Crutcher, Neil Wilson Funk, William Phillips, N. C. Curcton, M. N. Cralle, Charles A. Funk, T. T. Becker, G. W. Scott, with Hon. E. J. McDermott as attorney.

The Capital Stock was placed at $100,000 and is owned almost entirely by Louisville men and those of nearby towns.

This stock paid 2% in January and 3% in February. A list of these stockholders has been printed and can be obtained on application to the company so that this statement may be fully verified either by mail or in person.

The Louisville Mansfield Lead and Zinc Company has just been organized with T. M. Crutcher, President; T. T. Becker, Vice President; N. C. Curcton, Secretary; W. E. Newbold, Treasurer, and with the following directors: J. C. Mahon, T. M. Crutcher, N. C. Curcton, T. T. Becker, and W. E. Newbold.

The Capital Stock is with shares at $5.00 each, and is being offered in lots of 100 or 500 shares, but may be offered in smaller lots if desired. A very profitable and safe investment.
